Hi good evening. Not sure to what extent you're looped in on convoy security briefings. But I raised with rcmp the advisability of having parliament sitting entirely virtual on Monday, as a precaution, if the protestors continue through the weekend. I noted that OPS chief sloly had already recommended that public stay away from downtown, so why not do same for the Hill. It was put to me it was too early to make that call, but rcmp and sergeant at arms and PPS would work together for a recommended approach. LeBlanc was on the briefing with me earlier today. Wanted to put on your radar.

Thanks. I know Sam and Zita and others have been fairly plugged into security folks about it. They told me last night PCO security folks perhaps aren't taking it as seriously as they should. Re Monday, I tend to agree we should assess how it looks on the weekend

FYI. Hearing from mp's asking / worried about security on Monday
Dom and I are circling back with officials on security. I do think we should seriously consider sitting virtual on Monday.

Have a look
Do we really want MPs, staff , all gravitating to the main attraction? If that kind of congestion is still there on the 31st, I don't see how it's safe or even feasible for the PM to get in and get out , and he has an armed convoy of his own!

Tried calling. I was just going to say: I got off a call with PCO re the tabling documents. John B and I feel good about them, I understand Min Lametti has now fed in a couple of minor comments, and we're going to show the PM the "final" around 1245. Not sure if you have reviewed yet, but we are on track for tabling by 530pm so we can start debate tomorrow
